

Care after a child swallows a magnet

Children's Emergency Department

Information for Patients and Carers

Produced: August 2021

Review: August 2024

Leaflet number: 1217 Version: 1

Introduction

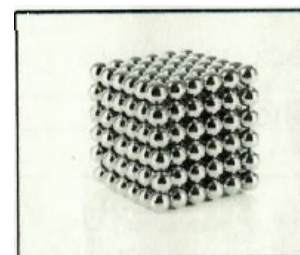

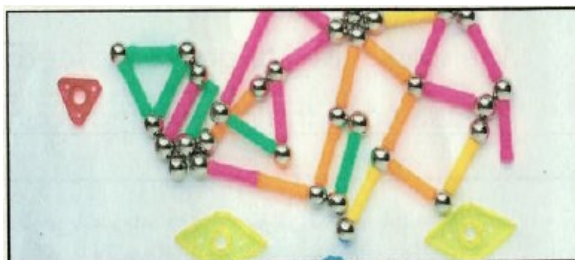

You have been seen today in the Emergency Department as you have swallowed a magnet. Even though it is still inside of you, hospital staff have decided that you are well enough to go home but that you may need a further follow up. This leaflet will give you further information about your care.

Why are magnets dangerous if swallowed?

Recently, a different type of magnet (also known as neo magnet, bucky balls, magnet balls or Super Strong Rare-Earth Magnets) has gone on sale. They are most often sold as 'adult desk toys, stress relievers or brain development toys'. It is illegal to sell them to children under the age of 14.

They are between 7 and 14 times stronger than traditional magnets and are sometimes called super strong or powerful magnets. They come in a variety of shapes, most often balls or discs. Some examples of what they look like are shown below.

If more than 1 of these is swallowed, or it is swallowed with another metal object, it can lead to damage to the internal organs.

Will I need further tests?

You will need a follow-up X-ray, 6 to 12 hours after going home. This follow-up X-ray is extremely important so that we can make sure that the magnet is moving normally through your bowel.

Until you have this repeat X-ray, remove any external magnetic objects so they are not close to you and avoid clothes with metal buttons or metal buckles. You don't need to check your poo to try to find the magnet.

Your follow-up X-ray is: Time: _____ Date: _____

Please return to the Children's Emergency Department where we will be expecting you.

What should I look out for?

Return to the Emergency Department immediately if you:

- have concerns that further magnets or dangerous objects may have been swallowed
- are being sick (vomiting)
- see blood in your vomit or poo
- have tummy (abdominal) pain
- have a fever
- have concerns about a change in a child's eating patterns e.g. not wanting to eat or drink
